MASTER TRUST-BASED LIFE INSURANCE SCRIPT (V2.1)

(Discovery → Recommendation → Application)

OPENING

“Hi ____, this is Rob Martinez getting back to you about the information you requested on life insurance. Did I catch you at an okay time?”

(Pause – wait for yes)

“Perfect. My job is pretty simple —
I just want to understand what you’re trying to accomplish and see if there’s even an option that makes sense.

If there isn’t, I’ll tell you that too.
Fair enough?”

TRUST ANCHOR (CREDIBILITY CHECK)

“And just so you know who you’re speaking with —I am a licensed life insurance agent.

If it helps, I can text you my license number so you know this is legitimate.”

(Pause. Let them respond.)

If YES:

“No problem, I’ll send that over now.”

If NO:

“Totally fine — just wanted you to have the option.”

DISCOVERY

“Just so I don’t make assumptions — what made you look into this now?”

(Listen fully. Don’t interrupt.)

“Is your main goal covering final expenses, or is it more about leaving something extra behind for family?”

“About how much were you hoping to have in place?”

“Are you currently working,
or are you on a fixed income?”

“And are there any health issues I should be aware of so I don’t steer you in the wrong direction?”

POSITIONING (NO PRODUCT DUMP)

“Based on what you shared,
most people in a similar situation usually look at a simple whole life policy.

It’s designed to stay in place,
build some value over time,
and help cover expenses when the time comes.”

“That said, whether it’s affordable or approvable really comes down to health and budget — so the next step is just seeing what options you qualify for.”

TEMPERATURE CHECK

“Before I go any further,

does this sound like something you'd at least want to explore, or are you still just gathering information?"

(If yes / maybe → continue)

TRANSITION TO APPLICATION (LOW PRESSURE)

"The only way to know for sure is to submit a quick application.

That doesn't lock you into anything — it just lets underwriting tell us what's available."

"If something doesn't look right, we don't move forward. Would you be open to taking a few minutes and seeing what comes back?"

INTRODUCING COVERAGE AMOUNT

"Based on everything you shared, the cleanest next step would be to submit an application for $50,000 of whole life coverage.

That amount is commonly used to help with final expenses and leave a little extra behind, but we can always adjust if needed."

INTRODUCING THE CARRIER

"For your situation, I'd start with Amerigo.

They tend to be competitive and are usually very fair for the health profile you described.”

“If underwriting surprises us,
we always have backup options —
this just gives us a clean first look.”

HANDLING LAST-SECOND HESITATION

IF THEY SAY: “I want to think about it”

“That makes sense.
What part would you like to think through —
the cost, the company,
or just the process?”

(Listen, clarify, respond calmly.)

IF THEY SAY: “What if I get declined?”

“Then nothing bad happens.
We simply know,
and we pivot to another option — or decide not to move forward at all.”

IF THEY SAY: “I don’t want my information out there”

“That’s fair.
It’s only used by underwriting
to determine eligibility,
and if we don’t move forward, it goes no further.”

FINAL DECISION CHECK

“Does it make sense to at least see what underwriting says
before deciding no?”

CLOSE STYLE (TRUST-BASED)

“My role isn’t to talk you into anything —
it’s to help you make a clear decision with good information.

Once we see the options,
you can decide if it feels right.”
