

LIFE & HEALTH INSURANCE OBJECTION PLAYBOOK

Purpose: Book more appointments. Close more deals. Handle resistance without losing posture.

Framework: Posture → Psychology → Rebuttal → Redirect to CTA

CORE SALES PSYCHOLOGY – YOUR POSTURE

- You're the Doctor. They're the Patient.
You prescribe. They decide. You are the authority, not a guest.
 - They Requested Help.
Whether it was a form, a Facebook lead, a direct mail card — they raised their hand.
 - Don't Sell. Serve.
You're here to protect, not persuade. But you need to guide them with confidence.
 - Control the Frame with Questions.
Whoever asks the questions controls the conversation.

UNIVERSAL RESPONSE TECHNIQUE: AAA + INTERRUPT

- Acknowledge the concern
- Align with empathy
- Ask a redirect question that gets you back on track
- Use the Interrupt Phrase:

“That’s exactly why I’m calling.”

COMMON OBJECTIONS + REBUTTALS (Expanded for Life/Health Insurance)

✗ “I’m not interested.”

What’s really happening: They don’t know what you’re offering, they’re uncomfortable, or they’re dodging perceived pressure.

Best Response (AAA + Frame Shift):

“I totally get it — most people say that at first. But you did fill out a form asking for information about affordable life protection. Was that just for yourself, or were you thinking about your family too?”

Alternate:

“That’s exactly why I’m calling. We’re following up on a benefit request you submitted. Just need to verify a couple of things. You still at [Address]?”

✗ “How did you get my info?”

Frame: Remove fear. Reaffirm credibility.

“Totally understand. I’m a licensed field underwriter with the NAIC. You responded to an ad or form requesting information about affordable life insurance. My job is just to show you what you might qualify for. Were you looking just for yourself or someone else too?”

✗ “I already have coverage.”

Frame: Don’t fight it — flip it.

“That’s great — most of the people I help already have something. My job is to review what you have, make sure there’s no gaps, and see if we can improve your rate or benefits. Has your health changed since you got it?”

Dig Deeper:

“Do you know if that coverage includes living benefits — like if you get cancer or need long-term care?”

“Do you know if your rate is locked in permanently?”

✗ “I have coverage through work.”

Frame: Educate without attacking.

“Gotcha. Work coverage is great to have. The only issue is — it’s usually temporary. If you lose your job or retire, you lose the coverage. What I do is help people set up private policies they actually own, so no matter what happens, their family is protected. Make sense?”

✗ “I don’t remember filling anything out.”

Lighten it up:

“No worries — I don’t remember what I had for breakfast! Looks like you listed your birthday as [DOB] and the address as [City]. Sound right?”

“It was probably a Facebook form or mailer. Most people forget — that’s why we follow up.”

✗ “Can you just email it to me?”

Don’t send anything. Qualify first.

“I could, but until I know more about your situation, I’d just be guessing — and I don’t want to waste your time. Let’s take 3 minutes to make sure I send you the right options. You got a second now?”

✗ “I’m at work / don’t have time.”

Respect + Rebook

“Totally respect that — real quick, do you prefer mornings, afternoons, or evenings? I’ll block out a 10-minute window just for you.”

✗ “I want to think about it.”

Response (Submit & Think):

“I hear you. Here’s what I recommend — let’s at least get the application submitted so we can see if you even qualify. No payments happen today. If everything looks good, you’re protected. If not, no harm done. Fair enough?”

✗ “Why do you need my social?”

“Great question — the carrier uses your SSN to verify your medical and prescription history through the Medical Information Bureau. It’s how they confirm you’re insurable without needing bloodwork or an exam. Nothing is ever billed or withdrawn until approval. Make sense?”

✗ “Why do you need my bank info?”

“Totally fair. The carrier uses it to verify ownership of the account and set up the billing for the first draft date if you’re approved. Nothing’s withdrawn until that happens, and you can change or cancel anytime.”

✗ “I’m a veteran — I’m covered.”

“First off, thank you for your service. I used to work exclusively with veterans, so I know VA coverage helps — but it usually doesn’t go far enough. A VA burial benefit might only cover $700–$2,000 max. That’s why most vets I talk to still set up private policies to cover the full cost.”

✗ “I’m self-insured / I have savings.”

“That’s awesome — congrats. But even with savings, wouldn’t you rather use the insurance company’s money first?”

You’ve got car insurance, right? And you don’t expect to crash. Same idea — this preserves your legacy and avoids draining assets if something unexpected happens.”

✗ “I’m donating my body to science.”

“Totally understand — that’s a powerful gesture. Just so you know, it doesn’t cover everything. There are still transportation, cremation, and paperwork costs. Let’s make sure your family isn’t left with any surprises.”

💥 BONUS OBJECTION CLOSES

“Let me ask you something...” (Pre-Close Flush)

“If I find a policy that fits your budget and locks in your approval today, is there any reason you wouldn’t move forward?”

“I’m just shopping around”

“Great — I shop for you. I work with 30+ carriers. Most people don’t know all their options, and rates change weekly. Let’s find out what you qualify for today and lock in the best option.”

“It’s not in the budget right now.”

“That’s exactly why we need to do this now. If something happens and you’re not protected, who’s writing the check? Let’s get you qualified for the minimum today — we can always upgrade later when things improve.”

🛡️ Questions That Flip the Frame

Use these to regain control:

- “If something happened to you tomorrow, who handles it?”
 - “Do they have $10–$20K sitting around?”
 - “Wouldn’t it make sense to have something in place just in case?”

YOUR NEXT STEP

I can format all of this into:

- A clean PDF objection handbook
- A rapid rebuttal cheat sheet
- An optional training script to drill objections daily

You want all 3? Or do you want it built into your current script as live-action objection branches?
Let’s make it tactical and field-ready.
